The William C. Clifton, Sr. Clerkship Program honors the legacy of former Rhode Island District Court Judge William Clifton, Sr. Judge Clifton grew up in segregated San Antonio, Texas, and went on to graduate from California State University and UCLA Law School. He began his legal career as a staff attorney for Clark County Nevada Legal Services before moving to Rhode Island where he became the first African American Special Assistant Attorney General. Judge Clifton continued serving his community in government roles as legal counsel to the Rhode Island Department of Education and the state's Public Utilities Commission. He also co-founded a successful law firm and served as Assistant City Solicitor for Cranston, Rhode Island. Throughout his life, he gave his time and energy to causes larger than himself including serving as president of the Providence Branch of the NAACP, and on the boards and committees of many civic organizations. Upon being named to the District Court, Judge Clifton presided with distinction and was known as a consummate jurist, admired for his intellect and judicial temperament, and respected by colleagues, court personnel, lawyers, and litigants.

Please write about how your background or life experiences have shaped your pursuit of a legal career and whether they have compelled you to serve your community as Judge Clifton did.
